

From Nathaniel Torres to Everyone:

Hello everyone! I am very passionate about our topics here. I am also practicing providing event coverage for my Communications class, would anyone like to speak with me later on and elaborate on what they learned and went over in their small groups?

From Maria Sprehn to Everyone:

American Anthropological Association has a list of resources that are helpful for understanding climate change and what to do about it.

<https://www.americananthro.org/anthropology-and-climate-change>

<https://www.americananthro.org/anthropology-and-climate-change>

From Maria Sprehn to Everyone:

Andrea Wulf's "The Invention of Nature" is an important book within this topic. A lot of people don't know about Alexander Von Humbolt's work.

From Maria Sprehn to Everyone:

If we don't have a reading list for our community, we should put one together.

From Diane K. McDaniel to Everyone:

Kim Stanley Robinson does good modern climate change SF if anyone is interested.

From Chip Gladson to Everyone:

Favorite climate change novel of the last decade: Bangkok Wakes to Rain by Pitchaya Sudbanthad
<https://www.npr.org/2019/02/20/695962061/stories-converge-in-a-flooded-bangkok>

From Chip Gladson to Everyone:

Gun Island by Amitav Ghosh
<https://www.npr.org/2019/09/16/761257295/amitav-ghosh-the-world-of-fact-is-outrunning-the-world-of-fiction>

From Gillian Backus to Everyone:

Here's another: The Control of Nature by Jon McPhee